Strategic Alliance aimed at business growth

A new strategic alliance between two Cambridge based companies will provide a comprehensive recruitment solution to the healthcare marketplace.

Remtec and PiR Interims are delighted to announce their new strategic alliance, allowing clients to benefit from a combined expertise in medical device, lifescience and pharmaceutical recruitment. The two Cambridge based companies can now provide permanent and interim recruitment solutions to the global life science marketplace.

Remtec previously only offered recruitment services for permanent positions whilst PiR Interims was solely a supplier of senior level interim managers. Both companies were keen to offer clients a totally integrated service offering and following a successful trial period, have now signed a formal agreement to work together. Under the agreement the two companies will be actively introducing this new comprehensive service offering to their combined wider European client base.

Nigel Job, CEO of Remtec says "I am really enthused at the prospect of this alliance, many of our clients have asked us about offering interim services and now we are able to do so".

Carolyn Douthwaite, Managing Director of PiR Interims commented, "We have always been committed to presenting innovative solutions to clients and this alliance enables us to provide a permanent offering. We are extremely excited about working with Nigel and his team, especially as Remtec's values and customer service ethos are closely aligned with our own."

Marketplace

The European medical technology and life science/healthcare market continues to remain strong in the current economic climate. The demographics of our society mean we are all living longer and absorbing more healthcare resources along the way. Healthcare companies require highly trained professionals to help in their R&D, product development and sales and marketing of innovative new products and drugs. This new alliance is well placed to provide specialist recruitment consulting services to assist in the growth and development of life science organisations.
